PLANO, Texas (August 4, 2021) – As one of the most sought-after Lexus Black Line models, the RX 350 and 450h are back for 2022 with a fresh take on this special edition model. This year 2022 RX Black Line models will be limited to 2,500 units – split 2,100 gas and 400 hybrids across North America. With all the finishes of the Premium Package, guests can enjoy a comfortable ride with the unique Black Line touches.

To show off the unique Black Line features, the RX 350 and RX 450h will be available in two exterior colors, including optional Eminent White Pearl and Caviar. When paired with the 20” black wheels and lug nuts, the aggressive stance of the RX comes to life. On the front, the black signature Lexus spindle grille is balanced between the black outer mirrors and black lower front bumper. On the rear, the special edition models feature a black name plate in the lower right of the rear power door.

Inside the luxury crossover, the RX Black Line touches are evident in the black open-pore wood trim and light gray stitching on Black NuLuxe seats. The unique stitching carries throughout the interior on the console, shift boot, steering wheel and the upper instrument panel. To complement the elevated styling, each RX Black Line model includes black floor mats, cargo mat and key gloves. The Premium Package is included on all RX Black Line Special editions, which includes Lexus Memory System for power driver’s seat, outside rearview mirror and steering wheel.

The new 2022 Lexus RX Black Line special edition is available at showroom floors nationwide. With a limit of 2,100 units on gas and 400 units for hybrid in North America, the U.S. suggested MSRP for RX 350 Black Line starts at $49,450, and RX 450h AWD Black Line MSRP is $52,150.
